Not illustrated. 1879 Excerpt: . we have virtually done by condemning all the old and offering nothing better in its place. It is-not safe to assume that everything new is reformation, or that a theory or method is necessarily bad because our fathers used it. For my own part I would give much more for that which has stood the test of fifty years than for the mushroom theory that has shot up in a night from the fertile brain of some visionary pedagogue. We can of course have little sympathy with those whom Wendell Phillips so aptly describes as not being able to look upon the new moon with pleasure because of their deep sorrow for the loss of that venerable institution, the old one; but even these are less ridiculous than are those who, because the moon is two weeks old, eagerly forsake its light to follow every...
