Well, according to statistics, their main motive in the vast majority of cases is sexual. Serial killers often believe they re much cleverer than the police and will never be caught. They sometimes single out police detectives and taunt them with confident clues, always staying one step ahead. And they often have obsessions with common themes: time-keeping, tidiness, religion, dates. OK, those are the stats, but what drives Kieran and Chris to kill? He s an ultra respectable deputy headmaster at an equally respectable public school in wealthy Cheshire, where everything runs like clockwork. Chris, meanwhile, is a carer for terminally ill patients at a hospice. But Kieran s blood runs cold. He is pure, conscience-free evil. Since the loss of his wife to AIDS, he wants someone to pay, and someone will. Chris s blood runs hot, needing ever-higher highs to get her past the pain of each working day. From the caterpillar of Chris emerges the black butterfly Ruth, seeking the forbidden: sex, booze and - ultimately - death. Her assumed name, as used in the Internet chat site where the two first meet, is not chosen by accident: she would have been Ruth Ellis if the real Ruth Ellis hadn t beaten her to it. Kieran, following her lead, takes on the cyber-persona Frank, modelled at a whim on Mad Frankie Frazer, henchman to the Kray twins. That s what drives these serial killers. First, he kills a prostitute; purely so that he can observe her path into the next world. Then they both happen across a woman injured in a car accident; she is sent in the same direction....
