The transactions are generally not subject to regulation by SEC, CFTC, or any other U. S. financial regulator. Thus, CDS and other OTC derivatives are not subject to the dis-closure and other requirements that are in place for most securities and exchange traded futures products. Although recent initiatives by regulators and industry have the potential to address some of the risk from CDS, these efforts are largely voluntary and do not include all CDS contracts. In addition, the lack of consistent and standardized margin and collateral practices continue to make managing counterparty credit risk and concentration risk difficult, and may allow systemically important exposures to accumulate without adequate collateral to mitigate associated risk. This area is a critical one and must be addressed going forward. Gaps in the regulatory oversight structure of and regulations governing financial products such as CDS allow these derivatives to grow unconstrained, and...
