The regulation is brought about by the CO₂, and the concentration of expired products in the air of the lungs is thus always kept at a normal uniform level. Mr. McCann: I have spent a good many nights on sleeping cars, and I don t find so much trouble from the CO, content as the fact that I Catch cold from the overheating of the cars, while sleeping. There should be something done to regulate the temperature of the cars. I think this is something that Dr. Crowder probably could assist us in materially. If he would advocate some kind of regulation to...
